COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course explores Canada’s history from its creation as the Dominion of Canada and the consolidation of the country marked by the completion of the transcontinental railway through to the most recent years in Canadian history, from the 9/11 attacks in 2001, the G20 summit in 2010, through to the contemporary “meltdown era.” Readings, lectures, and discussions encourage students to become familiar with the major events in modern Canadian history and its themes, which include urbanization, war, the Great Depression, industrialization, regionalism, multiculturalism, immigration, devolution, etc. In-class discussion and short assignments focus attention on the practice of history and lay the groundwork for a research paper.

PREREQUISITES

Admission to Liberal Arts or by permission of the instructor. A willingness to read, to be curious and to ask why will be an enormous asset and are highly recommended.

EQUIVALENCY OR TRANSFERABILITY

This course is virtually identical to every other post-Confederation history course taught at universities across the country. You’ll have no trouble transferring it to just about any program at any institution.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

With conscientious application and successful completion of the course, you will be able to

- A. Speak generally and with some confidence about Canada's journey from Confederation to about 2010; and, more specifically,
- B. Outline the main historical periods, issues and themes, and actors in post-Confederation Canadian history; and
- C. Draw connections between the events and tensions of our post-Confederation past and contemporary Canadian affairs here and abroad.

The course will also introduce you to the academic study and practice of Canadian history in the age of the Internet. It will set you assignments that will have you using various types of sources, and thinking and talking about and writing history. As a result, over the semester you will

- D. Gain practical writing, presentation and discussion experience that will stretch your analytical and critical thinking skills; and
- E. Hone your research skills and exercise your ability to sift through digital resources to locate high-quality information.

COURSE FORMAT

The classes build on material you read before class with illustrated lectures, course site resources, which include text, images and videos, and are augmented by tutorial discussions, debate and writing.

RELATED COURSE REQUIREMENTS

None.

ASSESSMENTS

Attendance & Participation

Attending classes is a student job requirement. I would like you to participate in the class by being prepared for class, willing to contribute to your own learning and to that of the others in the class and to engage in the conversations we have about the material. Take advantage of our small classes to get the most out of the course.

Assignments

“Postcards” (20%)

Outcomes All. Students will prepare and contribute 4 short (400-500 words) “postcards” to chapter forums on the course site in which they examine and report on some event, person, cultural practice or object, development, etc., drawn from the chapters under consideration in class. Directions, templates and rubrics will be provided. The postcards are due January 22, February 12, March 14, and April 02. (Note: these dates are five days later than originally announced.)

Research paper (20%)

Outcomes All. The history research paper aims to make a case for understanding an event in the past in a particular way. You will research a historical event or condition (on a topic chosen in consultation with the instructor) and report on it in a short paper (of about 1,500 to 2,000 words or roughly 6-8 pages, cover and references excepted). A selection of possible topics, and further details on and guides to this assignment will be provided in class and posted to the course site. The paper is due March 31.

Tests

Online chapter quizzes (15%)

Outcomes A and B. Each chapter has a short content-focussed online multiple-choice, T/F quiz (in Moodle) that must be completed within a week of the last lecture for that chapter. A practice quiz will be available. Each chapter quiz may be taken twice (each will be somewhat different) and the mark recorded for the quiz will be the higher of the two attempts. The quizzes must be done by the first Friday after the end of the chapter.

Midterm exam (20%)

Outcomes A, B and C. An in-class, 70-minute midterm exam will cover material in the first four chapters (1885 to 1972). It will consist of identification, short answer and short essay questions.

Final exam (25%)

Outcomes A, B and C. A comprehensive, three-hour final exam will be written in the Liberal Arts exam period. It will consist of identification, short answer and essay questions. The exam period runs from April 15 to 26.

ACADEMIC AND STUDENT CONDUCT

Information on academic standing and student rights and responsibilities can be found in the current Academic Regulations that are posted on the Student Services/ Admissions & Registration web page.

Attendance is integral to student success. Discussion and participation are particularly important in this class, and students are expected to attend regularly and punctually. If you miss a class, it is your responsibility to find out what you missed and to complete any work assigned.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is a serious academic offence. Plagiarism occurs when students present the words of someone else as their own. Plagiarism can be the deliberate use of a whole piece of another person's writing, but more frequently it occurs when students fail to acknowledge and document sources from which they have taken material. Whenever the words, research or ideas of others are directly quoted or paraphrased, they must be documented according to an accepted manuscript style (e.g., APA, CSE, MLA, etc.). Resubmitting a paper which has previously received credit is also considered plagiarism. Students who plagiarize material for assignments will receive a mark of zero (F) on the assignment and may fail the course. Plagiarism may also result in dismissal from a program of study or from the College.
